 the need to increase the level of immunization throughout the county, especially in the pre-school-age bracket.
 Dr. Sutherland pointed out that the evening clinics have been arranged specifically for the convenience of working parents who, otherwise, would not be able to take advantage of the daily clinics.

THE SPECIAL vaccination program is part of a nationwide drive, coordinated and financed by the U. S. Public Health Service.

In Los Angeles County, 35 per cent of children under 5 years of age are not protected against polio; 50 per cent of children under 3 and 80 per cent of all adults are inadequately protected against diphtheria, whooping cough and tetanus.

Dr. Sutherland said the trend is similar across the nation—that despite the fact that there are adequate vaccines, a large percentage of the U. S. population is not immunized.

"There is a serious need for proper protection against these dangerous diseases," Dr. Sutherland said. "It is particularly alarming in low income and economically deprived areas," he added.

"WITH THE start of the polio season this month, parents should take every precaution to have their children immunized," he said.

In discussing tetanus, Dr. Sutherland referred to a case reported just last week of a 3-year-old South Gate child who developed tetanus following what seemed to be a minor injury on April 14. The youngster had not been previously immunized against tetanus and the nature of his wound seemed to be so insignificant at the time, that no medical treatment was given at all. The child is now a patient at County General Hospital.
